WRITTEN OPINION OF THE
INTERNATIONAL SEARCHING AUTHORITY

PCT / JP2005/013374

Box No. VIII Certain observations on the international application

The following observations on the clarity of the claims, description, and drawings or on the question whether the claims are fully supported by the description, are made:

Claim 1 includes all labels for laser welding having the desired properties of "a resin layer in which the permeability ratio is at least 20% with respect to laser light having an oscillating wavelength within the range of 740-1100 nm, a total ray permeability of no more than 50% with respect to visible light compliant with ASTM D1003, and a haze value of at least 70% compliant with ASTM D1003," but what is disclosed according to the meaning of the PCT Article 5 is only the particular label for laser welding described in the embodiment of the specification, and since a general solving means for realizing the above desired properties cannot be said to have been disclosed even when taking into consideration the common general technical knowledge available at the time of the application, claim 1 is not supported in accordance with the meaning of PCT Article 6.

Therefore, the search was performed within the scope disclosed in and supported by the specification, or in other words for the particular label for laser welding of the embodiment specifically described in the specification.

Supplemental Box

In case the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient.

Continuation of: V.2

Claims 13-15

The inventions of claims 13-15 do not appear to involve an inventive step over document 1 cited in the ISR. For example, it is normal for objects subjected to laser welding to have absorbency with respect to laser light, as with the laser absorbency test piece in document 1.

Claim 16

The invention of claim 16 does not appear to involve an inventive step over document 1 cited in the ISR. What object to use for laser welding is matter which can be selected appropriately.
